International Association of Maritime Universities

The International Association of Maritime Universities (IAMU) was established in November 1999 with 7 universities and research institutes representing 5 founding continents, up to now it has 61 members (including 60 maritime schools/institutes and 1 special member, Nippon Foundation) from 34 countries around the world. IAMU was born with the mission of establishing and maintaining a global network of member schools to create high-quality human resources for the world maritime industry; Creating opportunities for global maritime training and education development through a science-based approach to practice... For nearly 20 years, IAMU has played an important role in fostering maritime universities' collaboration around the world; Maintain contact and exchange between member schools as well as companies and other international maritime organizations.
